On 17 July 2025, the UK government announced an important change to its voting laws. From the next general (1) _____, 16- and 17-year-olds will have the right to vote in the UK. This will be the first time in history that teenagers so young can vote in (2) _____ and Northern Ireland. In Wales and Scotland, 16-year-olds can already vote in local and national elections.

The last time the UK changed the voting (3) _____ was in 1969, when it was lowered from 21 to 18. The government now says it is time for another change. Many young people already work, pay (4) _____, and can even join the military at 16. Because of this, the government believes it is (5) _____ to give them the right to vote.

This reform is part of a larger plan to make elections more modern and accessible. Other changes include:

- Accepting (6) _____ cards as a form of voter ID.
- Creating a digital voter (7) _____ that people can show on their phones.
- Introducing automated voter registration, so people are automatically added to the electorate when they turn 16.

The government believes these changes will add around 1.5 (8) _____ new voters aged 16 and 17 to the voting lists. The Minister for Elections called this a (9) _____ reform, meaning it is a very big and important change for democracy.

However, not everyone agrees. Some people think that 16-year-olds are too (10) _____ to understand politics and make good (11) _____ choices. Others believe that young people are interested in the future of their country and should have a voice in how it is run.

Many European countries, like Austria and Germany, already allow 16-year-olds to vote in some elections. (12) _____ of the reform say it is time for the UK to follow this example.
